4. ...judges were appointed for life as long as they behaved and good behavior was defined to include retirement by age 70 if reaffirmed by the Senate every five years?
5. ...there was a right to a jury trial of peers?
6. ...State judges were elected but often ran unopposed like world-famous Piazza?
7. ...wire communications described by law in 1934 were nicknamed the "internet" by an elderly oligarch in 1996 and this nickname was called a "holy new medium"?
8. ... wire communications were regulated as common carriers by the FCC?
9. ...Google Inc and Netflix got to pay for faster or more consistent delivery by wire.
10. ...the right to control an author's personal reputation (copyright) existed in "England" since 1735 to control unauthorized use of indecent creations.
11. ...copy[rite] or right to protect personal reputation was misspelled in the United States intentionally in 1790 to establish a new language and create a new dictionary by Noah Webster.
12. ...this legal rite was used to make Mr Webster's dictionary the "new" authoritative U.S. dictionary in 1828 and was the first dictionary EVER with [sic] "copyright" or [sic] "tung" and alleged "tongue" was a mistake supposed to be spelled "tung".
13. What if one 23-page lawsuit addressed ALL of these except (1, 6)?

All links will disappear though these may remain colored if scanned in color unlike the former exhibits filed. The linked text will still be underlined or visible as remains a “link” if on the page per Jennifer H Doan Esq of Google Inc.
